

Are you attracted to him/her?

Are you attracted to this person?

Attraction is not everything, but it is important.

Attraction is to relationship what appetite is to nutrition. God gave us both attraction and appetite for a reason. He wants us to enjoy our food while getting nutrients; similarly, being attracted to your spouse goes a long way in keeping love and romance alive.

There are a lot of people who eat only based on what tastes good to the appetite. They eat a lot of junk. Eventually their health suffers. But this is not a reason to say appetite is bad. Enjoying your food is equally as important as the nutrients you are getting.

Each of us has preferences in what we like or get attracted to in the opposite gender. I know a guy who only likes plus size women while other men love petite ladies. Most women love tall men while others get excited about intelligent men. Ladies who

Again, this should not be the only factor in deciding if someone is for you however it does help if you are attracted to the prospect in some way, shape or form.

By the way chemistry can be developed. I know of a lady who told me she “never liked a bone” in her husband when they first met. However, after years of knowing, associating and speaking to him she not only developed a liking for him but also a strong romantic bond.

Research has also indicated that many arranged marriages eventually become romantic.
